NEW ROUTE

For a Railway in Alaska Really Discovered by Prof. Martin in 1910.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 30.—Prof. Lawrence Martin, of the University of Wisconsin, one of the greatest living authorities on glaciers and glacial movements, in a communication just received by Gilbert H. Grosvenor, director of the National Geographic Society, at Washington, D. C., substantiates his claim to the discovery of a new railway route in Alaska, connecting Portage or Passag Bay, on the west side of Prince William Sound, to Turnagain Arm. Although the United States Geological Survey, in a bulletin made public January 1, states that "some excitement has been caused by the discovery of a feasible railway route" connecting the above two points, Prof. Martin points out that the discovery was made by the 1910 Alaskan Expedition of the National Geographic Society, under his direction. The government bulletin coincides with the report made by Prof. Martin to the society's research committee chairman, to the effect that the new route, by use of a tunnel about two miles long, will avoid the glaciers and yield low grades for both in and out-bound traffic, and that the distance from tidewater to the Mt. Seward coal field will be reduced by it to about 136 miles, with only one adverse grade and that a low one. Prof. Martin quotes from his report as follows: "We feel certain that, including the cost of the long tunnel, a railway only eleven or twelve miles long and practically at sea level could have been built from Passage Canal to Turnagain Arm for much less than the $5,000,000 used in the construction of the six-and-a-half miles of the Alaska Northern Railway from Seward to Turnagain. This would have resulted in a marked saving of grades, a saving of distance, and an elimination of nearly all of the glacier complications which still threaten the Alaska Northern railway. If the government does purchase and extend this railway it may still be cheaper to adopt the Passage Canal terminal, as could possibly be done with the shortest route and the longest necessary tunnel for less than $2,000,000.

The harbor in Passage Canal was shown by sounding made by us in 1910 to be quite as good for ocean steamships as Resurrection Bay, upon which Seward is located. Practically no icebergs float into Passage Canal or Prince William Sound from Port Wells. The possible disadvantage in this respect could never be as great as that which will come to Seward if the Bear Glacier, at the mouth of Resurrection Bay on the western side, advances a quarter to a half mile and sends floating icebergs into the path of the ocean steamships there. The maximum possible activity of the glaciers tributary to Passage Canal and to the head of Turnagain Arm could never be such a menace to the building and maintenance of a railway, particularly if the railway were protected by a tunnel in the critical area of snow slides and glaciers near Passage Canal. The Bartlett Glacier though now inactive, could, by a very moderate advance, completely block the northern pass across the Kana Mountains. Indeed, the railway goes so close to the glacier that even the slightest advance will do great damage. The Spencer Glacier constitutes an even greater damage to the railway."

FINE BABY GIRL.

SOCIAL

Elaborate Reception.
Most elaborate in all its appointments and floral decorations was the large reception given by Mrs. William H. Lewis from 3 to 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon in her home on Mulberry street. The bright sunshine of the afternoon brought out many guests and the smart costumes worn by the many women and girls enhanced by the elaborate floral decorations of the rooms, beautified by the myriads of electric lights, formed a brilliant scene not soon to be forgotten by the three hundred guests who attended. Spring blossoms and flowers were used in profusion, supplemented by ropes of smilax and ferns.

The decorations in the parlor were obtained in white roses, sweet peas and orchids; the window tops were gracefully festooned in Dresden effect with showers of sweet peas contained by vines of smilax and asparagus, while the mantel was banked with potted plants of ferns with groupings of orchids and roses. Portiers of ropes of smilax and showers of sweet peas enhanced the scene. The decorations in the library and reception hall were long stemmed pink carnations and ferns, while the dining room table, with its lace covering, had for its centerpiece a large basket of white roses, orchids and violets with a border of maiden hair ferns augmented by an artistic bow of pink maline under the soft glow of the electric lights formed a most brilliant setting. The decorations which were so artistically and perfectly carried out in the Dresden effect were furnished by the Hayman Greenhouse Company.

The hostess was assisted by her sister, Mrs. James Graham, of Detroit; Mrs. Harry Campbell, of Denver, Colo.; and Mrs. Melville S. Jarvis, of the United States army. The aides were Mrs. Dorsey Potter and Mrs. Arthur Thorn. In the dining room where refreshments were served Mrs. Wirt Lewis presided, assisted by Mrs. David B. Carper, while in the sun parlor, which was a scene of beauty flooded with sunshine and balmy air, had for its pleasing decorations a deep frieze of crimson roses and carnations trailing vines of asparagus and ropes of smilax. Coffee was poured in this charming retreat by Mrs. Harry Curtis and Miss Ewing, assisted by Mrs. Edward S. Wallis, Mrs. Edward Bryan Templeman and Miss Musgrave.

A delightful program of music was rendered all during the reception hours by the Cadenza orchestra. Quite a number of out of town guests attended.

By Mrs. Cain.

Most delightful in all its appointments was the meeting of the Ladies' Sewing Circle last evening from 8 to 11 o'clock at the home of Mrs. D. S. Cain at Adamston. An interesting line of fancy work was indulged in and many helpful suggestions made. A contest in which Mrs. Larry Biggs was awarded a beautiful prize was a feature of the entertainment. At an appropriate hour the hostess served delicious refreshments which were greatly enjoyed.

FAIRMONT, Jan. 30.—Dr. S. L. Jepson of Wheeling, secretary of the West Virginia State Board of Health, will be here Friday night as honor guest at a banquet at a banquet to be held by the Marion County Medical Society. He will give a speech at the banquet.

Baked Goods Sale.

The ladies of St. Mark's Lutheran church will hold a homemade baked goods sale in R. T. Lowndes grocery store on West Main street, starting at 9 o'clock Saturday morning and continuing through the day.

Fancy Work.

Fancy work and music were the diversions at the meeting of the East End Sewing Club held at the home of Miss Margaret Mulheran last evening. Miss Mulheran had as an honor guest Miss Helen Connell, of Pittsburg.

To Give Card Party.

PARDONED

By the President without Serving Any Part of His Sentence is Embezzler.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 30.—President Wilson today pardoned Arthur S. French, of Minneapolis, sentenced last year to five years in the penitentiary for embezzlement as cashier of the First National Bank, of Ellendale, N. D.

The president was shown that the bank lost no money and that French's difficulty arose more from lack of knowledge than from any attempt to defraud. Both the United States judge and the district attorney in the case recommended a pardon. French has not served any of his sentence.

opened there sat Gompers at the head of the table gloriously drunk with a bottle of booze in his hand. Mr. Gompers denied that he maintained a machine to keep himself in office and as an illustration said he had had two offers of positions from the governor of a great state, one paying $8,000 a year and the other $10,000, but had refused both to continue in the labor movement.

"The labor movement is a part of my life," he continued, "and I am going to stick to it. You may drive me out of office, but you can't drive me out of the movement."

RESULTS

awakens to this fact, it will turn to the Republican party to restore sound and stable government. These three principles upon which the Democratic party is founded are the tariff, the currency and the relation of the states to the central government.

"I am not one of those who think that Woodrow Wilson is a great president. If he is, in my judgment, he has not shown it. He has not been at the head of the government long enough to prove his greatness, nor has there been time sufficient to warrant the partisan praise that the policies he has had written into the statutes are going to prove the panaceas predicted by his following. The business condition, as everybody knows, is depressed, and there is a want of confidence on the part of thinking people everywhere. The several messages he has read to the country constitute the chief claim of his adherents of his possessing the qualities of great statesmanship. In my opinion they prove just the reverse: They are smooth reading essays, framed in a classic style, but they do not show any signs of the superior statesmanship which an author is credited by his partisan admirers with having."
